

How do I use the Remote Research Library?

The RRL includes hundreds of theological journals and magazines. However, the search functionality for these resources will be somewhat different from the books in your Logos library. Below are some instructions to search your journals.

Path 1 - Follow this guide: How to Search Logos Journals

Path 2 - That being said, there is one other way you can search the journals. It's sometimes difficult to explain this in words, so check out this video which shows you how to do the search. It was designed to train people on how to use Logos, specifically with the RRL.

At around the 19 minute mark (you'll see a dot for a chapter mark) the section shows how you can quickly search all your journals. You can use this to search for a passage or a topic. And, you can follow this technique to search any book or set of books. Once you filter the books by commentaries or journals or Bible dictionaries, you can do the same search. However, most of the time that's not needed because your Passage Guide will bring back everything relevant to the passage (commentaries) and your Topic Guide will bring back Bible dictionaries and other info automatically.
